

Working Past 65: Medicare Special Enrollment Guide

Description

If you're working past 65, you're not alone. Millions of Americans choose to stay on the job after reaching Medicare eligibility age, whether to continue earning, maintain employer health coverage, or delay retirement benefits. But when it comes to Medicare, working past 65 changes your enrollment timeline and can impact your costs for years to come.

One of the most important things to understand in this situation is the Special Enrollment Period (SEP)—a unique window that lets you sign up for Medicare without facing late penalties. This article explains how SEPs work, how they're triggered, and what they mean for other coverage types like Medigap and Part D prescription drug plans.

Understanding Medicare Enrollment Basics

Most people first become eligible for Medicare at age 65. The Initial Enrollment Period (IEP) is a seven-month window that starts three months before your 65th birthday, includes your birthday month, and extends three months after.

If you miss your IEP and don't have other qualifying coverage, you may have to wait until the General Enrollment Period (January 1 – March 31 each year) to sign up, and you could face permanent late enrollment penalties.

But here's where working past 65 can make a big difference: if you have qualifying employer coverage, you can delay Medicare enrollment without a penalty—and you'll get a Special Enrollment Period when that coverage ends.

What Is a Special Enrollment Period?

A Special Enrollment Period (SEP) is a limited time during which you can enroll in Medicare outside your Initial Enrollment Period without penalty. SEPs exist to accommodate certain life events—one of the most common being the loss of employer-sponsored group health coverage.

If you're working past 65 and have creditable coverage through your job (or your spouse's job), you're allowed to delay enrolling in Medicare Part B—and sometimes Part A—until that coverage ends. When you stop working or your group coverage ends, your SEP begins.

How the SEP Works When You're Working Past 65

Here's the key timeline:

- Length of the SEP: You have 8 months from the date your employment ends OR your group coverage ends—whichever comes first—to enroll in Medicare Part A and/or Part B.
- What counts as "group coverage": Your insurance must be through an employer with 20 or more employees (for Medicare primary rules). If the employer has fewer than 20 employees, Medicare generally becomes primary at 65, and you may not be able to delay without penalty. This situation has its own nuances, so you should make sure you understand your specific situation before making any decisions about Medicare.
- When coverage overlaps: You can enroll in Medicare at any time while still covered by employer insurance, or you can wait until your SEP begins.

Medicare Special Enrollment Period Timeline (Working Past 65)

- IEP: 3 months before to 3 months after 65th birthday month
- Working past 65 with creditable coverage: Delay Part B & D
- SEP after retirement: Part B - 8 months, Part D - 63 days

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- COBRA confusion: COBRA coverage is not considered active employer coverage for Medicare purposes. If you delay Medicare until COBRA ends, you could face penalties and gaps in coverage.
- Retiree coverage misunderstanding: Retiree health benefits also do not count as active employer coverage for delaying Medicare enrollment without penalty.

Part B Enrollment and Penalties

Part B covers outpatient care, preventive services, and doctor visits. If you miss your SEP, you could be charged a permanent late enrollment penalty of 10% of your monthly premium for each full 12-month period you were eligible but didn't enroll. That's why knowing your SEP window is critical when working past 65.

How SEPs Affect Medigap Enrollment

A Medigap plan (Medicare Supplement Insurance) helps cover the deductibles, copayments, and coinsurance that Original Medicare leaves behind.

- Initial Medigap Enrollment: Normally, you have a 6-month Medigap open enrollment period starting when you're 65 or older and enrolled in Part B.
- If you delay Part B: Your 6-month Medigap enrollment period starts when you eventually sign up for Part B—whether that's at 65, 68, or 72.
This is good news: delaying Medicare because you're working past 65 means you don't lose your guaranteed-issue rights for Medigap. You'll still be able to buy any plan available in your state without medical underwriting during that window.

Medigap 6-Month Guaranteed Issue Period

- Starts when you are 65+ and enrolled in Part B
- Lasts 6 months from Part B effective date
- No medical underwriting during this time

default watermark

How SEPs Affect Part D Prescription Drug Coverage

Part D covers prescription drugs. The rules for delaying are slightly different from Part B.

- You can delay Part D without penalty if you have creditable prescription drug coverage through your employer (or your spouse's employer) while working past 65.
- When that coverage ends, you have a 63-day SEP to enroll in a Part D plan or a Medicare Advantage plan with drug coverage.
- If you miss that 63-day window, you'll face a permanent late enrollment penalty—1% of the national base premium for every month you were without creditable coverage.

Part D Prescription Drug Coverage 63-Day Deadline

- 63 days from loss of creditable prescription coverage
- Includes employer or union coverage loss
- Late penalty: 1% of base premium per uncovered month

Timing Example: Working Past 65 and Retiring at 68

Let's say you turn 65 in August 2025 but keep working until you retire in September 2028.

- August 2025: You become eligible for Medicare but stay on your employer's group health plan, which is creditable.
 - September 2028: Your employment ends. This triggers your SEP.
 - By May 2028: You must enroll in Medicare Parts A and B (8 months after coverage loss) to avoid penalties.
 - By late October 2027: You must enroll in Part D or a Medicare Advantage plan with drug coverage (63 days after coverage loss) to avoid penalties.
 - Medigap enrollment: Your 6-month open enrollment for Medigap begins as soon as your Part B coverage starts. However, you can, and should if you want it to begin the same day as Part B starts, sign up for Medigap prior to Part B starting and schedule it to start simultaneously.
-

Key Tips for Smooth Transition from Employer Coverage

1. Confirm your coverage is creditable: Get a written statement from your employer's benefits administrator.
 2. Mark your SEP deadlines: Put them in your calendar before your retirement date.
 3. Don't rely on COBRA to delay Medicare: Enroll in Medicare when your active employment coverage ends.
 4. Consider enrolling in Part A at 65: It's usually premium-free if you've worked at least 10 years, but check with your benefits team first—especially if you have an HSA.
 5. Review your prescription drug coverage: Make sure it meets Medicare's creditable coverage standard to avoid Part D penalties.
 6. Plan your Medigap timing: If you want a supplement, the 6-month window after your Part B start date is the best time to apply.
-

The Bottom Line

Working past 65 can be financially and personally rewarding, but it also requires careful Medicare planning. Special Enrollment Periods give you the flexibility to delay Parts B and D without penalties—as long as you have qualifying employer coverage and enroll within the SEP deadlines.

Missing these deadlines can result in lifetime penalties and coverage gaps. On the other hand, understanding your SEP rights lets you time your Medicare enrollment to fit your retirement plans, coordinate with other benefits, and ensure you have the coverage you need when you need it.

Need one-on-one help navigating your SEP while working past 65? An independent Medicare broker can review your situation, confirm creditable coverage status, and guide you through the enrollment process for Part B, Part D, and Medigap so you avoid costly mistakes.

65Medicare.org is a leading, independent Medicare insurance agency for people turning 65 and going on Medicare. If you have any questions about this information, you can contact us online or call us at 877.506.3378.

- Medicare's Hidden Costs \(2026\): The Bill You Never Saw Coming
- Pennsylvania Medigap Plans: A Complete Guide to Medicare Supplement Coverage in PA
- Wisconsin Plan G: Why Doesn't It Exist?
- The Issue-Age Medigap Myth: Why Age Doesn't Matter? Isn't the Whole Story
- Medigap Premium Increase Letter: How to Understand It and What To Do Next

Category

1. Going on Medicare

Date Created

August 16, 2025

Author

65medicare